

2024 Board Election Candidates

This year, four seats will be filled in Mountain Health Co-Op's board election. Candidates may not appear in the same order on the ballot as they do in this list.

Stacia Creek, Incumbent

Montana

Candidate, Individual Member Representative

Stasia, a longtime Montana resident, owns and manages a successful real estate brokerage in Eastern Montana, bringing over 20 years of experience in real estate and business financial literacy. She is currently serving her second year on the Mountain Health Co-op board and has held various leadership roles on non-profit boards across the state. Passionate about representing the needs of rural residents, Stasia is committed to ensuring affordable healthcare options for small business owners in Montana, Wyoming, and Idaho. In her free time, she enjoys exploring Montana with her husband and their rescue dog.

Nolan Hill, Incumbent

Idaho

Candidate, Individual Member Representative

Nolan Hill is a lifelong Idahoan who resides in Idaho Falls, Idaho. For the past 14 years Nolan has been directly involved in resolving medical billing issues for those who have needed the help. He is a founding partner and Chief Financial Officer at Prime Capital 1, where he provides financing for low-income families throughout the Intermountain West and has served on the Mountain Health Co-op Board of Directors for four years. In addition to operating his finance business, he offers consulting services to energy-based companies to provide reliable, clean energy solutions for Tribal Nations in Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming. Nolan has been married to his wife Autumn for 17 years and they have four amazing children between the ages of 6 and 15 who all eat, breathe, and sleep soccer.

Caitlin Borgmann

Montana

Candidate, Individual Member Representative

Caitlin Borgmann is a mission-driven executive and former law professor with 25+ years' navigating high-stakes challenges for organizations including National ACLU, ACLU of Montana, and CUNY Law School. She has been a board member of six nonprofits with missions spanning healthcare, the arts, education, and civil rights. She has been a career-long advocate of equitable access to healthcare. Caitlin is now a consultant supporting nonprofits in board governance and organizational strategy and is a member of this year's cohort of Leadership Montana. Caitlin grew up in Missoula and moved back home to Montana in 2015. She is married, with two adult children.

Amy Odegaard

Montana

Candidate, Individual Member Representative

I've been a co-op member for the past 7 years. I reside in Bigfork, MT with my teen daughter and our assortment of animals. I've worked as a social worker for the past 20 years in various roles including child protection, school based mental health, and for the past decade as a mental health therapist in private practice in Polson, MT. I am interested in becoming a part of the board of directors because I value the benefits the co-op provides its members and how easy and efficient it is to work with them as a provider as well.

Jen Hensley

Montana

Candidate, Individual Member Representative

Born into a multi-generational farming family in the Crow Creek Valley of Montana, Jen Hensley considers conflict to be her comfort zone. Whether lobbying for clients or facilitating challenging corporate discussions, she sees managing differing opinions as crucial for growth.

After earning a degree in Cell & Molecular Biology from the University of Montana, Hensley shifted to advocacy and public policy. She now represents clients in manufacturing, healthcare, local government, regulatory analytics, and tourism. Additionally, Jen works with groups of all sizes on leadership development instruction and facilitation.

Hensley makes her home in Helena, Montana, and enjoys gardening, burning things in her firepit, and travelling as much as possible.

Annie Warner

Montana

Candidate, Small Group Member Representative

Born and raised in eastern Montana, Annie is an experienced nonprofit operations professional committed to creating positive change in her home state. For the last five years, Annie has served as the Operations Director at Forward Montana, the largest youth-led civic organization in the state. While she spends much of her time in brightly-colored spreadsheets, you will also find her out in her community registering voters or testifying at the State Capitol on issues she's passionate about.

Annie lives in the heart of the Rocky Mountains in Butte, America. She is happiest outside - winter weekends are spent on the slopes at her favorite ski area and summer evenings are spent on her bike exploring new trails in the Highlands.
